Preface

Dear Distinguished Authors and Guests,

The 2018 International Conference on Advanced functional Materials and Composites (ICAFMC2018) was taken place in Barcelona, Spain on September 2018.

The development of functional materials and their composites is a domain that has been growing very fast in the last few years. ICAFMC2018 covers all relevant aspects of composites research included in but not limited to the overall professional theme areas from material processing, development, characterization to application functional materials and their composites. It provides a high-standard international forum to introduce, to exchange and to discuss recent advances novel and practical techniques or application in the field of material engineering and application.

As an academic conference, this event aims to bring together leading academic scientists, researchers, scholars and students around the world to exchange and share their experience and research fruits with professionals and industrial engineers.

All papers were accepted through a peer-review process by the conference program committee and international reviewers. We hope that the conference results constituted significant contribution to the knowledge in these up to date scientific field.
